recipient of a 2023 certificate of merit for best historical research in recorded blues, r&b, gospel, hip hop, or soul music from the Association for Recorded Sound Collections in the late 1920s. Reverend A. W. Nix (1880–1949), an African American Baptist minister born in Texas, made fifty-four commercial recordings of his sermons on phonographs in Chicago. On these recordings, Nix presented vocal traditions and styles long associated with the Southern rural Black Church. As he preached about self-help, racial uplift, thrift, and Christian values, as Southerners like Nix fled into cities in the North to escape the rampant racism in the South, they contested whether or not African American vocal styles of singing and preaching that had emerged during the slavery era were appropriate for uplifting the race-specific vocal characteristics like those on Nix's recordings. These were linked to the image of the Old Negro by many African American leaders who favored adopting Europeanized vocal characteristics and musical repertoires into African American churches in order to uplift the modern New Negro citizen. Through interviews with family members, musical analyses of the sounds on Nix's recordings, and examination of historical documents and relevant scholarship, Terri Brinegar argues that the development of the phonograph in the 1920s afforded preachers like Nix the opportunity to present traditional Black vocal styles of the Southern Black church as modern black voices these vocal styles also influenced musical styles the moaning voice used by nix and other ministers was a direct connection to the blues moan employed by many blues singers including blind willie blind lemon and ma rainey both reverend a w nix and his brother w m nix were an influence on the father of gospel music thomas a dorsey the success of nix s recorded sermons demonstrates the enduring values african americans placed on traditional vocal practices
