until his death in august 1929 from 1907 he settled in the small town of ottery st mary in rural east devon england he was very active serving as a british delegate at the second hague peace conference in 1907 and on various committees related to church missionary and other more local affairs he was a magistrate and chairman of the urban district council he had a very wide social circle of family friends and former colleagues with frequent distinguished visitors he produced two seminal books a guide to diplomatic practice 1917 now in its seventh revised edition and referred to as satow and a diplomat in japan 1921 the latter is highly evaluated as a rare foreigner s view of the years leading to the meiji restoration of 1868 this book in two volumes is the last in a series of satow s diaries edited by ian ruxton this is the first ever publication this book is a demonstration of the richness worth and vitality of australian documentary record at the same time it is an introduction to collecting australiana for those who if not already bitten by the book bug have been dangerously exposed to it readers who are immune to the attractions of collecting but who value our past and its books will also find something to interest them in the following pages the essays in this book explore the vital role translation has played in defining changing and redefining linguistic cultural ethnic and political identities in several nations of the south pacific while in other parts of the world postcolonial scholars have scrutinized the role and history of translation and exposed its close relationship with the colonizers this has not yet happened in the specific region covered in this collection in translation studies the pacific region is terra incognita the writers of this volume of essays reveal that in the pacific as in all other once colonized parts of the world colonialism and translation went hand in hand the unsettling power of translation is described as it effected change for better or for worse while the pacific islanders encounter with the europeans has previously been described as having a fatal impact the authors of these essays are further able to demonstrate that the pacific islanders were not only victims but also played an active role in the cross cultural events they were party to and in shaping their own destinies examples of the role of translation in effecting change for better or for worse abound in the history of the nations of the pacific these stories are told here in order to bring this region into the mainstream scholarly attention of postcolonial and translation studies
