in this text first published in 1993 barrow decisively rejects the traditional assumption that intelligence has no educational significance and contends instead that intelligence is developed by the enlargement of understanding arguing that much educational research is driven by a concept of intelligence that has no obvious educational relevance Dr Barrow suggests that this is partly due to a widespread lack of understanding about the nature and point of philosophical analysis and partly due to a failure to face up to the value judgements that are necessarily involved in analysing a concept such as intelligence if intelligence is to be of educational significance it must be understood in terms that allow it to be educable written by a philosopher of education this study offers a reasoned and extended argument in favour of an original view of philosophical analysis it focuses on the issue of intelligence from a philosophical perspective it should be of interest to students of education philosophy and the philosophy of education alike across disciplines critical thinking is praised taught and put into practice but what does it actually mean to think critically in this brief volume sociologist Joel Best examines how to evaluate arguments and the evidence used to support them as he hones in on how to think in the field of sociology and beyond with inimitable style that melds ethnographic verve with dry humor Best examines the ways in which sociologists engage in fuzzy thinking through bias faddish cultural waves spurious reasoning and implicit bias the short chapters cover a general introduction to critical thinking and logic in the social sciences sociology as an enterprise key issues in thinking critically about sociological research challenging questions that confront sociologists and a call for the discipline to meet those challenges students across disciplines will learn the building blocks of critical thinking in a sociological context and come away with key concepts to put into practice
