a study of architecture examines how we both shape and are shaped by our private homes and public edifices and explains how our stylistic choices can be used to increase our chances of happiness bestselling author alain de botton considers how our private homes and public edifices influence how we feel and how we could build dwellings in which we would stand a better chance of happiness in this witty erudite look at how we shape and are shaped by our surroundings alain de botton applies stendhal s motto that beauty is the promise of happiness to the spaces we inhabit daily why should we pay attention to what architecture has to say to us de botton asks provocatively with his trademark lucidity and humour de botton traces how human needs and desires have been served by styles of architecture from stately classical to minimalist modern arguing that the stylistic choices of a society can represent both its cherished ideals and the qualities it desperately lacks on an individual level de botton has deep sympathy for our need to see our selves reflected in our surroundings he demonstrates with great wisdom how buildings just like friends can serve as guardians of our identity worrying about the shape of our sofa or the colour of our walls might seem self indulgent but de botton considers the hopes and fears we have for our homes at a new level of depth and insight when shopping for furniture or remodelling the kitchen we don t just consider functionality but also the major questions of aesthetics and the philosophy of art what is beauty can beautiful surroundings make us good can beauty bring happiness the buildings we find beautiful de botton concludes are those that represent our ideas of a meaningful life the architecture of happiness marks a return to what alain does best taking on a subject whose allure is at once tantalizing and a little forbidding and offering to readers a completely beguiling and original exploration of the subject as he did with proust philosophy and travel now he does with architecture an alternative philosophical understanding of happiness can serve as a corrective to the accounts of happiness offered by modern sciences religion and consumerism this book argues that the notions of happiness unhappiness and chance in the philosophy of paul ricoeur offer an overarching conceptualization of happiness that has significant implications for contemporary philosophical accounts of happiness by analyzing ricoeur s philosophy and specifically his two articles on happiness le bonheur hors lieu 1994 and l optatif du bonheur 2001 anné h verhoef argues that a significant alternative mode of understanding happiness is found in the dialectical thinking of ricoeur ricoeur s dialectic of happiness and unhappiness entails that one cannot exist without the other unhappiness is not something to be overcome but something to be embraced furthermore ricoeur s recognition of chance in relation to happiness opens a recognition for happiness as something received without any effort while simultaneously preserving the aristotelian idea that one should strive for goodness there is a fragile dialectic of receiving and striving for happiness within the simultaneous dialectic of happiness and unhappiness
