as seen from the perspective of 1492 the medieval expansion of latin europe was nowhere as dramatic or enduring as in the iberian peninsula and the atlantic its christian kingdoms continued their advance against al andalus up to 1492 whereas territorial expansion elsewhere against the muslim world had either ceased or subsided by the late 13th century castile and portugal also transformed the atlantic ocean from the inaccessible dead end of eurasia into the most promising avenue for european expansion for the first time in history the articles collected in this volume explore the causes and the nature of this expansion from a variety of historical traditions they investigate the extent to which the transference of mediterranean traditions aided this process the characteristics of iberian conflict that eventually led to the success of its christian kingdoms and the motives for launching and techniques for running the first european overseas empires in the unfolding atlantic frontier in the process they illuminate the new identities and cultural interactions that this expansion produced in its wake while the new introduction sets them in the broader context attempts to show as a whole the peninsula made up of spain and portugal with the slow unfolding of a pattern of society and an attitude to life still subtly distinct from those north of the pyrenees the successive occupations of roman visigoth and muslim span between them more than a thousand years the peninsula s great contribution to the modern age was the opening up of the new world in the west by spain and of new routes to the east by portugal over the last century and a half the history of both peoples provides a case study in the essential relativity of forms of government reprint of the original first published in 1869 this is the first study in english of the political history of muslim spain and portugal based on arab sources it provides comprehensive coverage of events across the whole of the region from 711 to the fall of granada in 1492 up till now the history of this region has been badly neglected in comparison with studies of other states in medieval europe when considered at all it has been largely written from christian sources and seen in terms of the christian reconquest hugh kennedy raises the profile of this important area bringing the subject alive with vivid translations from arab sources this will be fascinating reading for historians of medieval europe and for historians of the middle east drawing out the similarities and contrasts with other areas of the muslim world
