Larry Shiner challenges our conventional understandings of art and asks us to reconsider its history entirely arguing that the category of fine art is a modern invention and that the lines drawn between art and craft emerged only as the result of key European social transformations during the long eighteenth century publisher's description offering the same versatility richly illustrated digital resources and pedagogical features of the longer book the concise history of art a global view provides a valuable option for shorter courses its forty-four chapters presented in four chronological parts provide a coherent structure to this briefer coverage each part begins with a brief chapter that lays out the major themes of that chronological era these thematic chapters set the stage for artworks found in the regionally focused chapters within each part because chapters were designed to be taught in any order or skipped altogether the book is flexible enough to be assigned in any course whether it covers the entire globe or focuses on a specific region or regions in speaking of art we often contrast the useful or mechanical arts with the fine arts by these terms we denote the difference between the arts which are used in making such things as are necessary and useful in civilized life and the arts by which ornamental and beautiful things are made the fine arts are architecture sculpture painting poetry and music and though we could live if none of these existed yet life would be far from the pleasant experience that it is often made to be through the enjoyment of these arts a history of art for beginners and students by clara erskine clement waters for these reasons we know something of egyptian art and nothing of egyptian artists and from all these influences it follows that egyptian painting is little more than an illuminated alphabet or a child s picture history in the hieroglyphics or writing characters of egypt it often occurs that small pictures of certain animals or other objects stand for whole words and it appears that this idea was carried into egyptian painting which by this means became simply a picture chronicle and never reached a point where it could be called truly artistic or a high art the first picture that was ever painted was a portrait or an imitation of something that the painter had seen so in sculpture the first statue or bas relief was an attempt to reproduce some being or object that the sculptor had seen or to make a work which combined portions of several things that he had observed but in architecture this was not true no temples or tombs or palaces existed until they had first taken form in the mind and imagination of the builders and were created out of space and nothingness so to speak thus painting and sculpture are imitative arts but architecture is a constructive art and while one may love pictures or statues more than the work of the architect it seems to me that one must wonder most at the last we do not know how long the earth has existed and in studying the most ancient times of which we have any accurate knowledge we come upon facts which prove that men must have lived and died long before the dates of which we can speak exactly the earliest nations of whose architecture we can give an account are called heathen nations and their art is called ancient or heathen art and this comes down to the time when the roman emperor constantine was converted to christianity and changed the roman capitol from rome to constantinople in the year of our lord 328 the buildings and the ruins which still remain from these ancient times are in egypt assyria persia judea asia minor greece etrusia and rome many of these have been excavated or uncovered as during the ages that have passed since their erection they had been buried away from sight by the accumulation of earth about them these excavations are always going on in various countries and men are ever striving to learn more about the wonders of ancient days and we may hope that in the future as marvellous things may be revealed to us as have been shown in the past
