in seventeenth century europe the copts or the egyptian members of the church of alexandria were widely believed to hold the key to an ancient wisdom and an ancient theology their language was thought to lead to the deciphering of the hieroglyphs and their church to retain traces of early christian practices as well as early egyptian customs now available in paperback for the first time this first full length study of the subject discusses the attempts of catholic missionaries to force the church of alexandria into union with the church of rome and the slow accumulation of knowledge of coptic beliefs undertaken by catholics and protestants it ends with a survey of the study of the coptic language in the west and of the uses to which it was put by biblical scholars antiquarians theologians and egyptologists seminar paper from the year 2006 in the subject orientalism sinology islamic studies grade 1 3 ben gurion university middle east institute course religious and ethnic minorities communities in the modern middle east language english abstract during the 1919 revolution under the slogan egypt for egyptians the copts fought hand in hand with their muslim brothers for national independence of egypt from britain the banner of the revolution was a cross within a crescent the ancient incompatibility of christianity and islam seemed to be abolished only one decade earlier this unity seemed impossible after the assassination of the copt prime minister butrus ghali the mob in the streets of cairo had been praising the murder with slogans such as wasrani the name of the killer wasrani who killed the nasrani christian and the coptic newspaper al watan had stated in 1908 that the copts are the true egyptians and the islamic conquest of egypt was oppressive the role of the copts in the national movement is as complex and ambiguous as the national movement itself we have to weight and consider various factors together in order to understand the different roles of the copts in the movement during this period we also have to differentiate between coptic clerks fellahin and urban copts as well as between the muslim mob and the muslim leaders of the national movement latter often influenced by ideas of western enlightenment this paper will examine the factors that determined the role of the coptic minority in the muslim dominated national movement between its emergence in 1879 and the 1919 revolution from different perspectives this includes a discussion of the role of the british policy the question of social integration and juridical equality exclusion as a distinguished religious community from the muslim majority the degree of islamisation or secularisation of the national movement and the role of sectarian strife between muslims
