why acknowledging diverse eco social relationships can help us overcome the political polarization that undermines our ability to protect the environment when we picture the ideal environmentalist we likely have in mind someone who dedicates herself to reducing her own environmental footprint through individual choices about consumption driving a fuel efficient car for example or eating less meat or refusing plastic straws this is a benchmark that many aspire to and many others reject in eco types emily huddart kennedy shows that there is more than one way to care about the environment outlining a spectrum of eco social relationships that range from engagement to indifference drawing on three years of interviews and research kennedy describes five archetypal relationships with the environment the eco engaged often politically liberal who have an acute level of concern about the environment a moral commitment to protect it and the conviction that an individual can make a difference the self effacing who share the eco engaged s concerns but not the belief in their own efficacy the optimists often politically conservative who are confident in their relationship with the environment doubt the severity of environmental problems and resent insinuations that they don't care the fatalists who are pessimistic about environmental decline and feel little responsibility to adopt environment friendly habits and the indifferent who have no affinity for any part of the environmental movement Kennedy argues that when liberals feel they have a moral monopoly on environmental issues polarization results if we are serious about protecting the planet we must acknowledge that we don't all need to care about the environment in the same way a reference on environmental vocations that covers planners educators and communicators environmental protection and energy natural resource management and what it takes to get into these careers including education internships and the job search
