excerpt from education in theory and practice books on the subject of education abound and because of the relative as well as actual value of the subject whose principles they attempt to expound it is necessary that they abound it is only by having access to the various view points as advanced by the various authors in their texts that anything like a full understanding of the subject is to be gained again students of the subject of education come from every walk of life and prepare themselves for the work in varying degrees while the author is not ready to assert that the field of education has more unprepared or partially prepared workers in it than other vocations he knows it to be a fact that it has its full as well as relatively large quota of unprepared or partially prepared workers for this reason books that would do the most good must be in thought language scope and manner of treatment so simple as to be easily within the reach of the less mature and more uninitiated of the group because of the slight acquaintance of these young students and workers with the nature and scope of the problems of this their basic science in a treatise of this kind which is intended to be primary in the sense of introductory it has been deemed both unnecessary and unwise to give many specific citations and quotations especially is this plan desirable since the text does not attempt to be argumentative or analytical but particularly descriptive and explanatory it is the aim and hope of the author that this little effort to open the field of education to the beginning and young student will be helpful to him in his struggle to solve the simpler problems of education in particular does he desire that both the principles discussed and the statements made shall prove to be enlightening in themselves and which is to him more important that they shall serve to inspire him and create within him a desire for a more advanced about the publisher forgotten books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books find more at forgottenbooks.com this book is a reproduction of an important historical work forgotten books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy in rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition we do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works from the winner of the Grawemeyer award in education in 2007 in the world of education reform where silver bullet ideas, ideologies and intellectual fashion clamor for influence, James Comer's thinking has long been a sea of calm, balanced and humane wisdom focused on the needs of the whole person. Reading Comer, you see the incompleteness of so many other approaches to reform as well as learn an integrated approach to making schools work and now here it all is in a single book. If you want to see how schools can actually work as opposed to affiliate with a prior belief about how they should work, this is a must read. Claude Steele, professor, the Center for Advanced Study in the Behavioral Sciences at Stanford University, the best introduction, professional and personal to the remarkable world of James Comer, physician educator par excellence. Howard Gardner, Hobbs Professor of Cognition and Education, Harvard Graduate School of Education, Cambridge, Massachusetts. James Comer is a rare constellation among social scientists: a great intellect, a keen analyst, a creative problem solver, and a man of enormous empathy. His writings are required reading for anyone interested in education reform or improving the odds for poor children. Geoffrey Canada, President and CEO, Harlem Children's Zone.

In a growing revisionist tradition, comparative educational scholars challenge conventional assumptions about quality education as a singular undertaking dominated by standardised assessments and globalisation. Influences the contributors to this volume illustrate the complexities and global dimensions of educational quality that emerged in their research. Several chapters critique educational reforms employing assessments aligned to global standards and large scale assessments revealing how considerations of contextual factors, internal needs and local traditions are essential for developing a quality curriculum or for overhauling a national education system. Most chapters interrogate the uses and misuses of standardised assessment results. The contributors reveal the importance of asking critical questions about quality education: how to access it and for what purposes; what contextual and cultural factors are important; what implementation issues and local level realities must be considered for true understanding of standardized assessment results; what content, skills and values are necessary and desirable ingredients; what roles teachers and administrators play and what benefits accrue in terms of outcomes for employment and labor market needs or for achieving autonomy and stakeholder participation. Critiques of narrow interpretations of standardised assessment data contrast with research based evidence that participation in large scale assessments such as PISA, TIMSS and PIRLS can indeed be beneficial to identify needed reform refinements and implementation.

shortcomings specific country cases include brazil canada the united states spain portugal ukraine kyrgyzstan and the philippines other chapters provide insights on quality education issues worldwide the volume offers readers a panorama of views on the diversity of paths to quality education
