in society in action piotr sztopka sets forth a highly topical contribution to central theoretical debates of contemporary sociology taking the idea and practice of collective mobilization as his theme sztopka argues that modern institutions particularly of late are characterized by an increasing awareness of collective empowerment the most obvious concrete expression of this phenomenon as sztopka makes clear is the rise of a diversity of active social movements such as those which dramatically transformed europe in the 1980s from the birth of solidarity in 1980 to the 1989 autumn of nations sztopka connects the interpretations of such collective activity to a wider grasp of the nature of social action the result is a comprehensive and original theory of social change which focuses on the self transforming influence on society of its members striving for freedom autonomy and self fulfillment he develops his theory by means of a general concept of social becoming the roots of which he traces to the early romantic and humanist work of karl marx and his followers and to two influential sociological schools of today the theory of agency and historical sociology sztopka situates his theory midway between the rigid determinism of social totalities and the unbridled voluntarism of free individuals social change he demonstrates can be understood neither as the outcome of individual actions taken alone nor as structurally determined actions instead he confers upon social organizations and movements a self transcending quality they express human agency yet by virtue of their active character are quite often able to achieve unpredictable outcomes throughout his analysis of social movements and revolutions in history sztopka emphasizes the dynamics of spontaneous social change generated from below a theoretical testimony to the rapid and fundamental social change in eastern europe in recent history against the fashions of postmodernist malaise boredom and disenchantment his theory of social becoming expresses the possibility of emancipation of change leading to positive gains his work registers a belief in progress not inevitably gained but its attainment fully dependent upon the creativity and optimism of an active citizenry

the human of the modern age is being silenced unconsciously to be exposed to social media content judged by societal norms and burdened by wounds from the past is an overwhelming weight as an observer and as an individual who is part of this universe i truly feel that weight on people s ears and shoulders for me the word noise is the most appropriate to describe the presence of social media societal expectations and inner emotional injuries noise never allows anyone to feel calm or at ease that is why it disturbs under this loud echo no one can truly see another from the inside we only see surface layers the inner the real is left unseen through this noise we learn how to fake an image to match a bigger picture it is what kills authenticity and the human s uniqueness we are not listening we are being disturbed every element that interrupts the heart from breathing is noise and this book is a brief introductory image of how these forces have triumphed over the human it is for those who are annoyed by the modern age an erudite and original book that gets to grips with a central bone of contention in the social sciences and beyond what do we mean by society sociology and modern social problems by charles a charles abram ellwood the word society is used scientifically to designate the reciprocal relations between individuals more exactly and using the term in a concrete sense a society is any group of individuals who have more or less conscious relations to each other we say conscious relations because it is not necessary that these relations be specialized into industrial political or ecclesiastical relations society is constituted by the mental interaction of individuals and exists wherever two or three individuals have reciprocal conscious relations to each other dependence upon a common economic environment or the mere contiguity in space is not sufficient to constitute a society it is the interdependence in function on the mental side the contact and overlapping of our inner selves which makes possible that form of collective life which we call society plants and lowly types of organisms do not constitute true societies unless it can be shown that they have some degree of mentality on the other hand there is no reason for withholding the term society from many animal groups these animal societies however are very different in many respects from human society and are of interest to us only as certain of their forms throw light upon human society we are delighted to publish this classic book as part of our extensive classic library collection many of the books in our collection have been out of print for decades and therefore have not been accessible to the general public the aim of our publishing program is to facilitate rapid access to this vast reservoir of literature and our view is that this is a significant literary work which deserves to be brought back into print after many decades the contents of the vast majority of titles in the classic library have been scanned from the original works to ensure a high quality product each title has been meticulously hand curated by our staff our philosophy has been guided by a desire to provide the reader with a book that is as close as possible to ownership of the original work we hope that you will enjoy this wonderful classic work and that for you it becomes an enriching experience
