in aboriginal and māori literature the circle and the spiral are the symbolic metaphors for a never ending journey of discovery and rediscovery the journey itself with its indigenous perspectives and sense of orientation is the most significant act of cultural recuperation the present study outlines the fields of indigenous writing in australia and new zealand in the crucial period between the mid 1980s and the early 1990s particularly eventful years in which postcolonial theory attempted to centre the margins and indigenous writers were keen to escape the particular centering offered in search of other positions more in tune with their creative sensibilities indigenous writing relinquished its narrative preference for social realism in favour of traversing old territory in new spiritual ways roots converted into routes standard postcolonial readings of indigenous texts often overwrite the difference they seek to locate because critical orthodoxy predetermines what difference can be critical evaluations still tend to eclipse the ontological grounds of aboriginal and māori traditions and specific ways of moving through and behaving in cultural landscapes and social contexts hence the corrective applied in circles and spirals to look for locally and culturally specific tracks and traces that lead in other directions than those catalogued by postcolonial convention this agenda is pursued by means of searching enquiries into the historical anthropological political and cultural determinants of the present state of aboriginal and māori writing principally fiction independent yet interrelated exemplary analyses of works by keri hulme and patricia grace and mudrooroo and sam watson australia provided the thick description that illuminates the author s central theses with comparative side glances at witi ihimaera heretaunga pat baker and alan duff new zealand and archie weller and sally morgan australia oceania has a rich and growing literary tradition the imaginative literature that emerged in the 1960s often reflected the forms and structures of european literature though the ideas expressed were typically anticolonial after three decades the literature of oceania has become much more complex in terms of style as well as content and authors write in a multiplicity of styles and voices while the written literature of oceania is continuously gaining more critical attention questions about the imposition of european literary standards and values as a further extension of colonialism in the pacific have become a central issue this book is a detailed survey of the expanding amount of critical and interpretive material written about the imaginative literature of authors from oceania it focuses on commentary and scholarship concerned with the poetry fiction and drama written in english by indigenous peoples of the pacific islands new zealand and australia the criticisms have appeared in academic books and journals since the mid 1960s they have developed to the point at which critical issues related to decolonization and the expression of ideas without having to first satisfy foreign expectations often determine the direction of such discussions entries are grouped in topical chapters and each entry includes an extensive annotation an introductory essay summarizes the evolution of pacific literature here is a wide ranging critical survey of the literature both oral and written of the indigenous people of australia mudrooroo is in a unique position to tell the history of indigenous literature and to comment on the key writers and texts this is an essential starting point for anyone wishing to know more about this fascinating and controversial subject
