the thesis of this book is that only a social personalism and no form of impersonalism can adequately account for the solidarity and stability of what we individuals share with all other members of our society our second nature in the ancient world the discussion of society at least since plato and aristotle began with the social nature of individuals as found in families and proceeded to topics such as the formation and the well ordering of societies according to eternal principles grasped by reason since the beginning of the modern world at least since hobbes and locke the discussion of society began with the relation of persons and society and then moved on to other topics usually political and legal ones the central problem was to find the basis on which individuals formed societies and how they could do so buford s question is with a more basic issue what do individuals and society share in common or what philosophers since cicero have called our second nature and how to best understand its unity and stability the crisis of our culture in the erosion of both solidarity and stability pointedly manifests itself in our second nature there the culture in which we live is felt lived and shared buford asks how we can lay bare our second nature revealing the extent of the crisis our second nature is the form of social actions of persons in triadic relations and buford argues that it is there that we find that trust unifies a society and provides the basis for the institutions that stabilize it where did the era of divided government come from what sustains split partisan control of the institutions of american national government year after year why can it shift so easily from democratic or republican presidencies coupled with republican or democratic congresses how can the vast array of issues and personalities that have surfaced in american politics over the last forty years fit so neatly within indeed reinforce the sustaining political pattern of our time these big questions constitute the puzzle of modern american politics the old answer a majority and a minority party plus dominant and recessive public issues will not work in the era of divided government byron shafer a political scientist who is regarded as one of the most comprehensive and original thinkers on american politics provides a convincing new answer that has three major elements these elements in combination not divided government as a catch phrase are the real story of politics in our time the first element is comprised of two great sets of public preferences that manifest themselves at the ballot box as two majorities the old cluster of economic and welfare issues has not so much been displaced as simply joined by a second cluster of cultural and national concerns the second element can be seen in the behavior of political parties and party activists whose own preferences don't match those of the general public that public remains reliably left of the active republican party on economic and welfare issues and reliably right of the active democratic party on cultural and national concerns the third crucial element is found in an institutional arrangement the distinctively american matrix of governmental institutions which converts those first two elements into a framework for policymaking year in and year out in the first half of the book shafer examines how dominant features of the reagan first bush clinton and second bush administrations reflect the interplay of these three elements recent policy conflicts and institutional combatants in shafer's analysis illuminate this new pattern of american politics in the second half he ranges across time and nations to put these modern elements and their composite pattern into a much larger historical and institutional framework in this light modern american politics appears not so much as new and different but as a distinctive recombination of familiar elements of a political style a political process and a political conflict that has been running for a much much longer time
