the late professor s i malyshev who died from a cerebral haemorrhage on 9 may 1967 at the age of 83 in the train while travelling to field work was one of the foremost european students of the hymenoptera in particular of the habits of solitary bees a subject on which he had published many papers since 1908 mostly in russian in 1935 he published an important paper on part of his work and i helped to edit the publication which was in english a few years ago some of my friends in california asked me if i could not persuade him to complete his early paper on solitary bees offering if necessary to arrange for a translation when i wrote to professor malyshev making this suggestion he no longer had the health to produce a new work but he sent me a copy of his recent book on the evolution of the hymenoptera which he thought might be worth trans lating sir boris uvarov was good enough to translate for me the chapter and section headings and it seemed to both of us that a lot of new ground was covered in a highly original way the explanation of the changes in behaviour that must have taken place when the simple plant feeding saw flies developed into highly specialized parasites or into industrious food collecting social insects such as the ants bees and wasps can well be regarded as one of the major challenges to zoologists

this book examines the settlement patterns and intersite variability in lithic assemblages of early jomon ca 5000 bp hunter gatherers in japan a model is proposed that links regional settlement patterns and intersite lithic assemblage variability to residential mobility the results of this study suggest that the early jomon people were not sedentary as previously assumed but instead moved their residential basis seasonally the implications of this result are discussed in the context of the development of hunter gatherer cultural complexity in general and the course of Japanese prehistory in particular
