the question why should i obey the law introduces a contemporary puzzle that is as old as philosophy itself the puzzle is especially troublesome if we think of cases in which breaking the law is not otherwise wrongful and in which the chances of getting caught are negligible philosophers from socrates to h l a hart have struggled to give reasoned support to the idea that we do have a general moral duty to obey the law but more recently the greater number of learned voices has expressed doubt that there is any such duty at least as traditionally conceived the thought that there is no such duty poses a challenge to our ordinary understanding of political authority and its legitimacy in what sense can political officials have a right to rule us if there is no duty to obey the laws they lay down some thinkers concluding that a general duty to obey the law cannot be defended have gone so far as to embrace philosophical anarchism the view that the state is necessarily illegitimate others argue that the duty to obey the law can be grounded on the idea of consent or on fairness or on other ideas such as community
