in 2002 young fadime sahindal was brutally murdered by her own father she belonged to a family of kurdish immigrants who had lived in sweden for almost two decades but Fadime's relationship with a man outside of their community had deeply dishonored her family and only her death could remove the stain. This abhorrent crime shocked the world and her name soon became a rallying cry in the struggle to combat so-called honor killings. Unni Wikan narrates Fadime's heartbreaking story through her own eloquent words along with the testimonies of her father, mother, and two sisters. What unfolds is a tale of courage and betrayal, loyalty and love, power and humiliation, and a nearly unfathomable clash of cultures. Despite enduring years of threats over her emancipated life, Fadime advocated compassion for her killer to the end, believing him to be trapped by an unyielding code of honor. Wikan puts this shocking event in context by analyzing similar honor killings throughout Europe, Canada, and the United States. She also examines the concept of honor in historical and cross-cultural depth, concluding that Islam itself is not to blame; indeed, honor killings occur across religious and ethnic traditions, but rather the way that many cultures have resolutely linked honor with violence. In honor of Fadime, Wikan holds profound and timely insights into conservative Kurdish culture, but ultimately the heart of this powerful book is Fadime's courageous and tragic story, and Wikan's telling of it is riveting.

The income that supports the activities of the National Academy of Sciences now comes from two major sources: program revenue received from sponsors to pay for the myriad studies and other activities undertaken each year by the National Academies of Sciences, Engineering, and Medicine, and a much smaller sum that is obtained from our endowment. Under the endowment spending policies adopted by the Council, the goal of the endowment is to provide stable support for the Academy's programs and activities. To achieve this goal, the Council, acting on the recommendations of the Finance Committee, has historically authorized spending from the portfolio at a rate designed to maintain the purchasing power of the endowment over time. This report of the Treasurer of the National Academy of Sciences presents the financial position and results of operations, as well as a review of the endowment trust and other long-term investments. Portfolio activities of our Academy for the year ended December 31, 2016, while this book provides essential financial summary to key personnel, it also serves as a vital informative resource for various members of the public, private, and governmental sectors.
