resolves the fundamental debate between cognitivists and social constructionists concerning the metaphysics of human psychology and offers new insights into therapy education and creativity

this book brings together mobilities and possibility studies by arguing that the possible emerges in our experience in and through acts of movement physical social and symbolic the basic premise that mobility begets possibility is supported with evidence covering a wide range of geographic and temporal scales first in relation to the evolution of our species and the considerable impact of mobility on the emergence and spread of prehistoric innovations second considering the circulation of people things and creative ideas throughout history third in view of migrations that define an individual life course and its numerous im possibilities and fourth in the inner psychological movements specific for our wandering and wondering minds this is not however a romantic account of how more mobility is always better or leads to increased creativity and innovation after all movement can fail in opening up new possibilities and innovations can cause harm or reduce our agency and yet at an ontological level the fact remains that it is only by moving from one position to another that we develop novel perspectives on the world and find alternative ways of acting and being at this foundational level mobilities engender possibilities and the latter in turn fuel new mobilities this interplay examined throughout the book should be of interest for researchers and practitioners working on mobility migration creativity innovation cultural diffusion life course approaches and more generally on the possibilities embedded in mobile lives this book addresses one of the most enduring debates within psychology namely the conflicting claims of those who adopt an individual cognitivist perspective and those who adopt a social culturalist perspective the authors examine this debate and provide fresh insights that permit the bridging of traditional dualisms between self and society with respect to the subject matter of psychology and between scientism and relativism with respect to knowledge about this subject matter this classic collection of essays by e p thompson one of england s most renowned socialist voices remains a staple text in the history of marxist theory the bulk of the book is dedicated to thompson s famous polemic against louis althusser and what he considers the reductionism and authoritarianism of althusserian structuralism in lively and erudite prose thompson argues for a self critical and unapologetically humanist marxist tradition also included are three essays of considerable importance to the development of the new left
