professor fage and professor oliver the editors of this collection are distinguished historians of africa and as founding editors of the journal of african history they both established the journal and used it to mark out developing areas of the subject in directing the journal they have pursued an active policy of commissioning articles in fields where the literature was scanty and in this volume they have collected together some of the most important articles they have published on african prehistory it is designed for the student of african history and the library that needs copies of frequently consulted papers to supplement its sets of periodicals all the articles contain either accounts of important research or more general review articles the book is illustrated with line diagrams and photographs one article which originally appeared in french has been translated into english the ethnographic material in this book derives from a concern with a contemporary south african literary works and poems it delves in to the corrective history of the region because otherwise it will be impossible to understand how the present came into being and what the trends are for the post apartheid south africa thus the material aims to represent the historical events that shaped south african poetry written in english archives of times past explores particular sources of evidence on southern africa s time before the colonial era it gathers recent ideas about archives and archiving from scholars in southern africa and elsewhere focusing on the question how do we know or think we know what happened in the times before european colonialism 0the essays by well known historians archaeologists and researchers engage these questions from a range of perspectives and in illuminating ways written from personal experience they capture how these experts encountered their archives of knowledge beyond the textbook 0the essays are written at a time when public discussion about the history of southern africa before the colonial era is taking place more openly than at any other time in the last hundred years they will appeal to students academics educationists teachers archivists and heritage museum practitioners and the general public between ad 900 and 1300 the shashe limpopo basin in limpopo province witnessed the development of an ancient civilisation like civilisations everywhere it consisted of a complex social organisation supported by intensive agriculture and long distance trade the mapungubwe cultural landscape as it is now known was the forerunner of the famous town of great zimbabwe situated about 200 kilometres to the north and its cultural connection to great zimbabwe and the venda people allows archaeologists to reconstruct its evolution this generously illustrated book tells the story of an african civilisation that began more than 1000 years ago it is the first in a series of accessible books written by specialists for visitors to south africa s world heritage sites the mapungubwe cultural landscape is one of the profound treasures of southern africa s social and archaeological history appropriately declared a world heritage site by the united nations educational scientific and cultural organisation unesco in 2003 contained within this landscape is indispensable information on precolonial state formation social hierarchies architecture of stone walled towns mineral processing and intercontinental trade and yet the mapungubwe state rose towered over its environs and then declined long before european colonial incursions mapungubwe reconsidered a living legacy contributes to the body of knowledge about mapungubwe straddling such issues as the relationships between humans and the environment management of mineral endowments and the form and impact of southern africa s global intercourse in this historical period

of a thriving civilisation around 800 ad 1200 ad this work contains images of the gold artefacts the pottery and the beadwork together with a history of the civilisation anthology from the year 1999 in the subject history africa grade 2 0 university of hamburg afrikanische studien language english abstract in europe a lot of historians have worked on african history for the period after the continent came under colonial rule but little has been written about african states contemporary to the european medieval period i e before the europeans arrived in africa especially the history of south eastern africa has been mostly the domain of white southern african researchers archaeologists historians and discoverers in the 19th and for the major part of the 20th century only since the independence of zimbabwe has a new generation of african researchers come to the fore but their work has been largely neglected in european literature the author tries to bridge this gap the work is particularly interesting as it tries to correlate the findings of three disciplines history archaeology and ethnology with the latter s particular subject of oral traditions ethno history can make a strong contribution where written sources end archaeology is important as early african societies did not produce written records but there is one element of sources which can help to go back in time from there the writings of islamic travelers and reporters which give rich evidence of the connections of their world to the south eastern african region from the 8th century onwards putting all these elements together the author gives a clearer picture of the formation of states in that region of africa and the role they played after they contacted global trade which centered around the indian ocean rim before the portuguese and later other european powers destroyed that network of independent partners and replaced it by their own protectionist colonial rule more work has to be done heinrich bruellau a historian at heart had to earn his living as a manager and consultant his many travels led him to zimbabwe and other countries of the region whose liberation struggle he had supported from the beginning he followed on the lead of his historian gene to engage with researchers of the region he even had the honour of meeting peter garlake the great old man of zimbabwean archaeology in his home but also got encouragement from dawson munjeri who is now the representative of zimbabwe at unesco with this book he is inviting researchers to invest more work into the global trade network of the medieval period in order to get a better understanding of the importance of the african contribution to world trade long before it was subjected to subjugation by colonialism
